

Appellate

Attorneys

Megan D. Hargraves
Brian A. Pipkin
Benjamin D. Jackson
Emily Runyon
Graham Talley
Karen P. Freeman
Cara D. Butler
Devin R. Bates
Colt D. Galloway
John P. Talbot
Blake Z. Brizzolara
Adam D. Franks
Drew J. Cunningham

Experience is powerful – especially when the stakes are high. That is why clients rely on the Mitchell Williams team of appellate lawyers.

The Mitchell Williams appellate lawyers are creative thinkers, strategic planners and persuasive writers. We tackle complex cases with sophisticated legal strategies, aggressively and successfully representing our corporate clients' interests.

Our litigators anticipate and prepare for appeals even before a trial begins, and we see our cases through to the highest courts with skilled oral and written advocacy. We also are retained by clients to appeal adverse lower court rulings, often due to a case's complexity, potential impact or unfavorable outcome reached below.

Our accomplished team of appellate lawyers includes many former judicial clerks, having served at the Arkansas Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, as well as other federal district courts. This gives us specific insight into the inner workings of appellate courts and a more nuanced understanding of how judges make decisions. Many of our appellate lawyers also bring deep knowledge of specific areas of the law, and we collaborate with other content-area specialists within our law firm when advantageous to our clients.

We handle appeals across a variety of areas of law, including:

- Administrative law
- Constitutional law
- Construction
- Consumer class actions
- Banking and financial services
- Bankruptcy
- Energy and environmental
- Employment and Labor
- Health care
- Product liability and mass torts
- Tax